1: Roth--122 (No date) 1890 Tasmanians
116, 352

"In their camping places 'some of them sat on kangaroo skins, and some others had a little pillow, which they called roéré, near a quarter of a yard long, and covered with skin, on which they rested one of their elbows' (La Billardière, II. ch. x. p. 47)."